Our friends from London, England, called again and asked if Kurt Cobaine, formally of Nirvana, had any messages for his fans. I sent my Agent to inquire and she found out he's doing quite well most of the time. He just sits around and cries, then gets up and sings this odd song;

Don't listen to the voices, mamma,
they don't know what to do,
Don't listen to the voices, mamma,
they're only foolin' you.
Don't listen to the voices, mamma,
They don't know what to do,
Don't listen to the voices, mamma,
They're only screwin' you.

Don't listen to the voices, mamma,
They don't know what to do,
Don't listen to the voices, mamma,
they're only foolin' you,
Don't listen to the voices, mamma,
they don't know what to do,
Don't listen to the voices, mamma,
They're only eating you.

That might not exactly be what you'd call a direct message, but I think under the circumstances it's a message, none the less.

The other day we simply HAD to clean out the closet, and we threw away a mess of things that I had worn for years, and that had piled up tremendous charges of psychokinetic energy but were simply of no use anymore...the yellow shirt I had worn both times I had dictated a Message From Muhammed, the old blue shirt that I had worn when Nazi 1 spoke through me to my wife, the pants I'd worn while dictating The Nazarene Book.

I drained off what I could of the psychic charge and threw these garments in the trash. I toyed with the idea of cutting them up into pieces two inches square and selling each for $1.00 a piece, but then realized I wasn't famous enough yet that people would be interested in that sort of thing. But can you imagine today, what a piece of the coat would be worth that Lincoln wore while giving the Gettysburg address, or what a piece of Charles Lindbergh's jacket would be worth that he wore while crossing the Atlantic? I, myself, would enjoy possessing even a tiny fragment of one of Gandhi's robes. The energies and dreams THAT would carry, or even something that had once belonged to John Kennedy!

Can you imagine what has been thrown away over the ages without the slightest thought that it would today be an immense or even immeasurable value? So it has always been, and so it will always be. It's the nature of man to cast away history.

THIS IS A UNIVERSAL LIFE MINISTRY.

By; Rev. Speaker Gerald A. Polley

In a previous article we mentioned native agents, and the question has arisen "What precisely ARE native agents?"

Native agents are humans whose Ancestors were taken away from Earth hundreds or even thousands of years ago, and raised on alien worlds, to return to Earth at a later date and perform scientific missions for the alien races that raised them. They are, in reality, aliens with human bodies, for the Souls within them are not native to Earth, and when they leave this realm of existence must return to their own Spiritual residence in order to advance.

On rare occasions these entities do develop the ability to remain in the local Spirit Realm, but this is not too common. Alien Souls generally like to return to their place of origin unless, by some catastrophe, it no longer exists.

Why do some races use Native Agents? Well, simply because their true selves are either too alien for humans to accept, or, incapable of existing in Earth's biosphere. It might be too hot for them, or too cold for them to exist here, or they might need a different atmosphere to breathe.

Native agents give them an opportunity to study Earth first hand, without upsetting the native populations.

My current state of unemployment brings up the interesting question of how did The Ancient Worlds deal with unemployment?

Well, the problem seemed to be far less on The Ancient Worlds than it is on Earth. For some reason they did not seem to go into these cycles of bust and boom that seems to plague the Earth. When unemployment DID occur, however, it was solved in different ways.

The Hashons had a system quite similar to the one that exists in The United States, with unemployment insurance. However, there were also some differences. If a company was forced to lay people off or shut down, all debts those people owed were immediately frozen. The people were still required to pay what they could on the debts but the banks could not charge them any interest on the principle until two months after they were employed. The government would also make an effort to provide funds to the community for temporary jobs to help take up the slack. The employment agency would also go far afield to find individuals work, and even help them find temporary housing if they were forced to relocate. These practices made a company shut down far less dramatic than on Earth.

In the Godden Empire where the economy was highly controlled unemployment was even rarer and usually solved by the unemployed being transferred to places where they were needed, rather they wanted to go, or not. And there were no complaints, whatsoever. To complain about a work assignment would bring an even worse one, or even a sentence to a labor camp for the entire family.

I think it could be agreed unemployment on The Old Worlds was different.....VERY different!

QUEEN VICTORIA QUESTIONS
Part Six

44. Though it was obvious you had many other things to contend with at the time, can you give us just a small idea on your feelings about The American Civil War?

A. This is something I wish I had had more time to devote myself to, and that my nation could have done something to bring to an end much quicker. The great suffering and horrendous casualties of that horrid time appalled me. I told my ministers to keep well clear of it, to come down on the side of the Union whenever possible, as I could not abide the Confederate opinion of slavery, but to make sure that, in no way England got involved in the insanity. My greatest fear was that somehow Confederate sympathizers in England would find some way to turn English public opinion against the north and draw my country into the conflict. There were some that even foolishly suggested that England should make use of the conflict to seize back some American territories that rightly belonged to The Crown. Such ideas were pure insanity, and I would have none of it.

45. What was your true relationship to John Brown? Were you ever married? Did you ever have intimate relationships with one another?

A. John Brown was my rock, my anchor to sanity in hard times. He would tolerate none of my nonsense, and when I was going off on a tangent he would snap me back. Without him I could have not endured. Once when I was quarreling with my daughter he entered my room and said 'Madam, this must not continue! You must make peace with your child. If you do not I cannot stay any longer with you. This is not the way you should behave!' This threat was enough to make me see my error and change my attitude. The oddest thing was he defended greatly those who despised him the most, saying 'Do not worry at it, madame they say these things because they do not understand, and in their love wish to protect you.' This dear man would have thrown himself before a bullet to protect me without the slightest hesitation. We were never intimate beyond an affectionate kiss or a hug when it was needed. He had other ladies for his manly needs, but I will admit, my jealousy towards them was horrible. This dear man had an exterior as hard as wood, but within him was a saintly man.

46. Did you ever have any knowledge of Spiritualism?

A. Of course! I heard tales of its very beginnings in America, watched its rise in England, and was a quiet believer.

47. Did you ever receive a message from Albert through the Medium Robert Lees?

A. No. I did not need to. Albert communicated with me daily. I knew the secrets of The Other Worlds including the fact there were Spirits on Earth that were not born on this world long before anyone else. Albert told me all these things but told me they must not be spoken of because it was not the time. I know there were rumors that Albert communicated through my beloved John. This is not true. But John often saw him with me and would acknowledge him just as if he was alive, and on a couple of occassions even conversed with Albert. He fully understood that this was something not to be spoken of with others, as they would surely think we were both quite mad.

48. Did you ever personally attend seances?

A. No. As I have said, I did not need them. Several of my ladies did, however, in disguise, and perhaps one of these was mistaken for me and started these rumors. I remember one of them coming to me in tears because her husband had rebuked her for turning down her cousin's proposal; a secret which no one knew. I must certainly say I was a believer.

49. What is your opinion of Christian Churches today? Do you feel reform is necessary?

A. Not only necessary, sir, long overdue! Christianity should be totally shut down, and then rebuilt from the beginning to better fit the vision that Our Precious Lord first intended for it. This should be done first of all, with the complete eradication of Catholicism with its dreadful poisoning of God's Truths to befit the purposes of man. Christianity must become a religion of love as it was intended to be and not an instrument of rule for an elite clergy.

50. Did you really look down on the children of Israel as much as historians say you did?

A. Of course not, my dear man! Because I did not believe in mixed religious marriages does not mean I looked down on anyone. I had the deepest respect for those who followed their Ancestry down from their Father Abraham. After all, Our Dear Lord shared the same blood and was a practicer of their religion. I did not disapprove of fraternizing with them. It was only the mixing of bloods that I disagreed with.

51. Did you really object to your first born associating with Jewish people?

A. I believe my previous statement answered that question.

52. What do you think and what DID you think of Bismarck?

A. Evil incarnate. The most wicked man of my era. More innocent blood was on his hands than any other. Time and time again my efforts to sustain peace were destroyed by his appalling greed. And his uniting of Germany caused the sorrow of two bloody world wars. Though the responsibility of those that followed after him cannot be minimized it must be remembered who laid the seeds of conquest.

53. What was your opinion of those within and without your family that were determined to end your seclusion?

A. Absolute contempt. I had every right to live as I wished and no one had the right to force another style of life on me. I did all that was in my power and I was deeply bitter that some even in my own family, did not respect my right of seclusion.

THE SPIRITS SPEAK returns in March, 1995, with a reprint of our interview from Adolph Hitler, as the 50th Anniversary of the fall of Nazi Germany is approaching. We wish to redo this important Work. A list of all Spirits we've interviewed is available for 2 29¢ stamps. Suggestions for future interviews welcome.

Somebody asked an interesting question the other day. "How do The Galactic Forces pay for the defense of the Earth? Isn't it rather an expensive proposition to keep blockade ships in this sector?"

Well, the question actually has a couple of answers. Most ships taking part in the blockade are merely performing their regular patrols. Very little special patrols have had to be added.

The ships patrolling for other illegal activity just have an additional burden at the present. As for the close in defense of Earth, this is paid for out of a special fund kept for Earth at the seat of The Galactic Government.

Earth entertainments seem to be very popular throughout the galaxy. Aliens have recorded such productions as William Shakespear's Midsummer Night's Dream at the Globe Theater, and other human entertainments for centuries. Any time these productions are shown, a payment must be made into Earth's account. Also, over the years artifacts have been removed from Earth which are very popular museum pieces on many alien worlds.

My contact explained to me that one race extremely interested in maritime warfare salvaged material from both the Bismark and The Hood including five bodies from each crew which are lovingly cared for and part of the display along with an unexploded British torpedo, English and German shells, twelve foot scale models of both ships, and many other small artifacts.

A percentage of the profits from such exhibitions also find their way into Earth's account. Aliens making clandestant visits to Earth for different purposes also must pay a removal fee and a passage fee.

Earth seems to be a good little money maker, and its inhabitants don't even know it!

We have been asked on behalf of certain people in Spirit to speak about the situation in England with Princess Diana and Prince Charles. The Royals in Spirit are appalled by what Charles has done to Diana, and with what her lover has done. This man so disgusts me, personally, that I will not even mention his name.

It is the intention of the English Royalty in Spirit that Charles should abdicate in favor of his first born son, and that he should remove himself from public life altogether, that because of the things that he has written and said about his wife he has little right to call himself a man, let alone consider himself worthy to be King. A King should be a man of honor, obviously something Charles has never become.

I can only say I agree with their opinions.

It is with the deepest sadness we must tell you that we have had to give up our last baby, Snowball, our little Poodle, has gone to be with The Lords. He was beginning to suffer too much and we just had to let him go, though it broke our hearts and we miss him dearly. We have not really minded that we have sacrificed so much over the years to keep The Truth going out, but that we did not have the money to take care of this dear and loving little creature properly saddens us more than anything else, while others make a fortune spreading ridiculous fabrications. Those who speak the Truth find it difficult to make ends meet because the Truth is not as pleasing as a lie that can be twisted to please the multitudes.

DIVORCE

In The Spiritist Republic divorce was frowned upon but acceptable if no reconcilliation could be negotiated. The marriage contract was considered sacred and could not be broken without extreme provocation such as adultery, theft, or an attempt on a spouse's life.

Penalties for violence against a marriage partner were very severe, even moreso than those against an ordinary acquaintance. The beating of a wife, or, a husband, could result in double the penalty of an ordinary assault.

In The Holy Godden Empire divorce was unthinkable. Only death separated a married couple. Adultery was punishable by life imprisonment. It was considered blasphemy to even discuss the possibility of changing the marriage laws, and blasphemy was punishable by the burning alive of the blasphemer and his or her family. Household violence, however, was common, as a woman could bring no charges against her husband, only her family could object to her mistreatment and males very rarely interfered in the affairs of their in-laws.

SHAMANISM AND THE MYSTERY LINES: LEY LINES, SPIRIT PATHS, SHAPE-SHIFTING & OUT-OF-BODY TRAVEL By; Paul Devereux. From; Lewellyn Publications, P.O. Box 64383, St. Paul, MN MN 55164-0383. Softcover. $12.95.

If you're into heavy reading on other cultures and ley lines in history this is the book for you. Though the basis of the book is to reveal the author's opinion on why such things exist, it contains much heavy research and surprising information on the metaphysical subjects contained in the title. It'll take a while to read, though only 238 pgs. and in places is rambling and dull. Though a scholarly work, throughout, even this states Souls are neither male or female, one of the most common misconceptions. Fascinatingly unusual!

MAYAN MAGIC By; Avendar Dragon From; International Guild Of Occult Sciences, 255 N. El Cielo Rd., Suite 565, Palm Springs, CA 92262. Write for price. Catalogue available for $3.00. Write or call 1-800-395-4467. Paperback or Hardcover.

More teachings from alien beings on how to improve your life and increase your psychic abilities from Quetzlecoatl, a reincarnation of the winged serpent from Mayan and Aztec legends. Great reading except for the usual mistakes that a Soul has no sex and you should not put so much emphasis on love. Also misinformation about the Atlanteans. Otherwise highly recommended. Though the book's title is a bit misleading. There doesn't seem to be anything regarding magick in it!

ASHTARIAN STUPIDITY CONTINUES

AUGUST 25, 1994

Apparently Ashtar Command still hasn't got the idea that they're not powerful enough to defy The Galactic Community. A few days ago I received word their agents had attempted to assassinate twelve of The Galactic Forces' leading politicians. Fortunately only one of them had been killed. A couple of others were wounded but the rest escaped, unharmed. It was soon learned that all the attacks had been arranged by the Ashtarian's diplomatic corps, who were all promptly arrested.

The Galactic agent asked me how they should proceed. I suggested they sterilize 1,000 of their highest ranking diplomats and their families and scatter the rest among the galactic civilizations. A couple of days later he returned with some disturbing news.

One of The Galactic Races was so enraged that The Ashtarrians had even threatened their Beloved Leader they loaded a squadron of their ships with a deadly bacteria, "Po-something," and sent them to attack the Ashtarian homeworld. If even one of these ships got through and released half of its missiles 95% of The Home World's population would be destroyed.

The Agent asked me if the ships sent to intercept should be called back or told to proceed. "Of course they are to proceed!" I told him. "Those ships must be stopped at all cost, no matter what, they must not get through!"

For over three days I have been waiting for word. It finally came this afternoon. The squadron was stopped, though it took the total destruction of two of their ships with the loss of their entire crew of over 200, and one of The Galactic Forces' ships with a loss of 75 Souls.

Unfortunately one of the ships had already left the squadron and attacked an Ashtarian outpost. The outpost had had no idea they were in danger. Their air systems were operating without biofilters. They didn't even know they had been attacked until their people started dying.

There were 10,487 Ashtarrians on the outpost, there were no survivors. They all died, every man, woman, and child. The Ashtarrians screamed that biological weapons were forbidden by every galactic agreement, and that the race that had used them should be punished. The Galactic Community agreed, and before they even considered a punishment 100,000 males of that race volunteered to be surgically sterilized, along with their wives and children. A small price, they said, to defend their glorious Leader. The Ashtarrians were asked if this would be sufficient. They said "No, no. We will ask no more in return than what we have lost. And only the men, not their wives and children."

Perhaps, just perhaps there's a little hope for these people yet. It has been decided until the Ashtarrians decide to mend their ways and agree to the non-interference doctrine, they will be blockaded into their own systems, forbidden all trade with The Galactic Community, and the blockade will only be lifted when they also agree to pay for the campaigns that have been necessary against them. So far, The Ashtarrians are saying to Hell with you all, we can fend for yourselves, which they probably can do. But they will soon find themselves missing those pleasurable goods that they enjoyed importing from their neighbors.

P.S. Because of the tragic loss of their outpost, all but five of the Ashtarian diplomats were returned. These five were directly involved in the one successful assassination. I also understand the price on my head has been risen to a Fowel Ship. (?)

AUGUST 30, 1994

Ashtarian leader of 75 dead! A newscast intercepted by The Galactic Forces has stated that The First Lord of The Ashtarian High Council was killed in the crash of his private flier on The Sacred Mountain near the capital around which he often flew. Little else was said on the matter, but in the same newscast it was mentioned that three Lords of The Supreme Council had also resigned and that the government was now being led by a hitherto little-known councilman of a low ranking family.

It is not yet known how these changes in the Ashtarian government will affect its current difficulties with The Galactic Community.

SEPTEMBER 1, 1994

We received today news of a further tragedy to The Ashtarrians. 3,202 Ashtarrians were poisoned by a shipment of food that had arrived from one of their subject planets. It was learned that one of the workers on that planet had deliberately poisoned the food with a sweet smelling synthetic lubricant, because his wife had been raped by his Ashtarian overseer and the local officials had disciplined him for registering a complaint. The subject was promptly seized and executed. The Ashtarrians are trying to claim this man was an agent of The Galactic Forces, but this claim is totally erroneous.

SEPTEMBER 8, 1994

Ashtarrians lose their most advanced luxury ship. In a tragic accident while visiting one of the great archeological sites within Ashtarian territory. Fortunately only 50 lives were lost, as the passengers and much of the crew were on the planet when the ship's engines seemingly without warning, developed a massive overload and exploded. Again the Ashtarrians blame The Galactic Forces for this tragedy, but they had nothing to do with it.

(Cont'd Next Issue)

Some of our associates have wondered why we do not refer to the people rebelling against The Ashtarrians by name, instead, calling them The First, Second & Third Rebellion. The simplest way to explain the answer, is, I can barely think the alien names, let alone pronounce them!

The star of the first system to rebel is called Nash Twi Berf, which means 'Light Of Eternal Joy.' The world that is rebelling in that system is called Bowel Nish Te Birth, which can be roughly translated to be "Place Of Eternal JOy." Now try saying these names four or five times, especially if you're dyslexic! I think you'll begin to understand why we skip them altogether! And the other two are even worse! So I think we'll be giving everybody a break by continuing on as we're doing.

Bye-Bye
ASHTAR COMMAND
